BIOGRAPHY

Fabbro di Chiavi, also known as Marco Pellizzari, is an artist whose life journey beautifully mirrors the intangible aspects of existence. Born on December 19, 1983, in Asolo (TV), Fabbro di Chiavi has carved a unique path in the realms of music and aerospace engineering.

As an aerospace engineer dedicated to contributing to the realization of earth observation and solar system exploration missions, Marco's professional pursuits lead him to embrace the mysteries of space. Yet, from an early age, a profound passion for music coursed through his veins. Starting with classical guitar studies, he ventured into the realm of the electric guitar, adapting to new horizons.

His sources of inspiration span international artists such as Steve Vai, Al Di Meola, Paco de Lucia, Joe Pass, Steve Morse, and Symphony X, alongside Italian icons like Banco del Mutuo Soccorso, New Trolls, and PFM.

The year 2020 marked a significant turning point in his life. Amid the COVID-19 pandemic, Marco harnessed his time to organize years of musical material, leading to the birth of his symphonic metal solo project, Fabbro di Chiavi. With Fabbro di Chiavi, he embarked on a journey that encapsulated the entire creative process—from the inception of an idea to its realization and promotion.

NEW RELEASE - EP Intangible pt.1

Following the release of the single "Light and Heavy" in March 2022, he has now unveiled the new EP, "Intangible Part 1." This latest artistic endeavor transcends conventional boundaries and encapsulates a concept deeply influenced by the Stoic philosophy—a profound observation of the contemporary world, harmoniously fused with the evocative power of orchestration, within the progressive and cinematic context. Fabbro di Chiavi's musical odyssey mirrors the Stoic ideals of embracing the unknown with curiosity and maintaining Apatheia in the face of adversity with unwavering grace.
